SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - The Guardian Angels are returning to Springfield.

Original member Arnaldo Salinas says the crime fighting organization known for its members red berets intends to re-establish a Springfield chapter later this month.

He says the goal is to have the first local recruits in place and properly trained in basic first aid and security skills by the fall.

It has been 20 years since the Angels patrolled Springfield.

The volunteer group will patrol just one night a week at first and increase that as more recruits come on board. Salinas says he'd also eventually like to establish patrols in Holyoke.
