KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- The crime-fighting group Guardian Angels plans to open chapters in both Kansas Citys.

A Guardian Angels leader said he'll begin recruiting late this month by going into area neighborhoods in search of volunteers.

A minister in Kansas City, Kan., helping to establish Guardian Angels in the area said he hopes to have members on patrol next spring. Rev. Golden Davis said 12 to 24 people are needed to start a local chapter.

Kansas City, Mo., pastor Eric Williams said he'll work to integrate the organization with other community groups. He said he believes the group can make a difference "one block at a time."

The Guardian Angels was founded in the 1970s by Curtis Sliwa to help keep New York City subways and neighborhoods safe.
