ORLANDO --

The Alliance of Guardian Angels says it's stepping up patrol in Orlando.

The group says starting Sunday, members will be targeting the Parramore community, but they will soon be expanding into the Orange Blossom Trail area.

Members say they're needed to help police who have been hurt by recent cutbacks in their budget.

The group first arrived to Orlando in 2006 because of record high murder rates.

They say they will make citizens arrests if they catch anyone committing serious crimes.
